

Learning without borders

Linking development of transnational leadership roles to international and cross-cultural teaching excellence

An Australian Learning and Teaching Council Leadership Project

The Project

The project focuses on leadership roles in the conduct of transnational and international education. It involves an investigation of staff experiences, expectations and preferences in areas including influences on career paths and on learning and teaching together with the identification of good practice in this area. The project does not constitute an audit of policy and practice; rather, the project is geared to development of recognition and support of leadership roles in transnational education and in internationalisation of curriculum.

Swinburne University of Technology is the lead institution in partnership with Curtin University. The project involves the Sarawak campuses of Swinburne and Curtin.
